W. P. WALTON,

Twenty-Four Years Ago.

Twenty-lour years ago Mr. Buchanan, the last of the democratic Presidents, est in the White House, grave and cireworn. Only one day of democretic rule remained. Already Mr Lincoln, in his robuse at Willard's, awalted, with a same of conservation, the coming of the eventful day that would usher in the republican regime.

At this time the Ilag of the linited States was tlying at but three points in the 7 seceded States. Two months before Robert Toomba bal eald in the Senate: "We are as realy to fight now as we ever will be I will have enga ity-or war." Mr Jefterson Davis had been Fremident of the Confederacy for two weeks, and the "bornie b'ue, ilak" was to be unfoided three days later. One hundred thousand soldiers were under arma in the Confederacy to be compacted into an army during that very week. The South was allema with excitement and the sentiment of the North was rapidly hardening into resolution. The Anglo Saxon blood was up, in the veins people that you notice. of Puritan and Cavalier, and war was inevitable. It was amid at this gathering storm, soon to burst with unregaled fury, the the etrong hands of Lincoln took the rein of government from the honest but uncertain grasp of Huchanan. The statesman martyr. The democratic party hade a long farewell to power, and the repullicans entered upon a career of sprender and of corrapiton.

A quarter of a century line procet since that day. A war without a persolet in scope and energy has seen the land. The graves of a million haroes testify to the value of the survivors. From the wreck of battle the Union hee been saved. Five millions of slaves have toen fr et and enfranchised. The right of seconion, cubmitted to the verdict of the an ind has been cut down torever An indiencluble repub lie of equal and novereign States in the lecacy of the war-and a tenderer and a e ronger and a better people rise up to call

President Lincoin, kindlest and greatest of republicans, met the death that skadow ed his lofty life at the hands of an assassin. It is lit, then, that we should set in apposition the two great chapters of our later history -to-day, the going out of the old democratic dynas'y -to-morrow, the coming in of the new. Let ue take to our bearts, in the moment of our triumph, the noble words attered by Mr. Lincoln in his hour of trial-iet us make the shihli leth of the new era of peace and good the soleum centence with which, in his inaugurai, he met the era of strife and of war-giorious words that, stretching as a how of promise across the guif of twenty-five dark and troublons years, prefigure the cloudless aun shine and prosperity to come.

AT CHURCH. BY SIVEL

| Written for the INTERIOR JOURNAL.]

Sunday morning; a veritable Sun-day. A bright atmosphere and an invigorating one; something brooding over nature that seems only to come on Sunday. A holy calm like a benediction, or like nature herself was at prayer. Just the day for a good wholesome sermon. So you put on your hat and start out.

The church is bright and pretty, too; everywhere money and taste have conspired to please the eye and invite the attention; nicely carpeted aides, polished bench. es, the light through painted glass bathing everything; the organ open waiting the organist and you test a restful content creeping over you as you wait fur the congregation to came in, for it is yet too early it seems, for any one except the eexton and vourseif. Presently they drop in by ones and two and three, and have to each other over the banches, and in a quiet way each one seems glad that the other is there Af er a while the house is filled. As you look over the congregation you can not help noticing the great number of careworn faces; faces that tell of unrewarded toil, of disappointment and errow. Grant them a real cheerful serm in, you think, and then you wonder what they come there for. Not the ones who are studying the "etyles" or flirting anoftly over fan tips and cane handles. But those who care not for gossip, fashion or flirting; the tired looking

What do they come bere for? To hear that God made them and the world? They hened that years ago. To bear that stolied that they might live through that death? They knew that too To hear the preacher tell anecdoter? No, you gave place to the hero-the diplomat to the think not. What do they come for? They come for spiritual food to make them stronger in their duty to God and man through all the coming week. They want to know that God was very resr to them when sorrow's hand was lald on them. That He looke upon their labore and feels for their sorrows and disappointments as a father who pitieth his children. Ali, It is a very easy thing for the rich end happy to ear that God la good, but It takes a great many tears to wash the eyee clear before one can see through poverty, toil and pain that God in really good. But you hear the preacher's voice now addressing them as his "dylag friends," and then he goes on to point out the way to life eternal. A narrow way indeed, a amel'seye, a way of groaning and a grea who died without confeering religion and leaves you to infer where be went. He does not eeem to tblnk it possible that much might have passed between that soul to save a soul outside of hie, the preacher's, why should we grown under a yoke which At last -after longer wanderings and He said was light and under which ail nature beside conspires to exuit and be glad? LINCOLN FORGAVE HIM. - One of M Lincoln's annoyances was the claims advanced for having first suggested hie nomination as Precident. Ona of thece claimants, who was the editor of a weekly paper published in a little village in Miesouri, called at the White House, and was ad mitted to Mr. Lincoln'e presence. He at once commenced stating to Mr. Lincoln that he was the man who first suggested bla neme for the Presidency, and pulling from his pocket an old, worn, defaced copy of bas paper, exhibited to the President an item on the aubject. "Do you really think," seid Mr. Lincoln, "that announcement was the occasion of my nomination?" "Certainly," said the editor, "the auggestion was so opportune that it was at once taken up by other papers, and the result was your nomination and election." "Ah! well," said Mr. Lincoln, with a sigh, and assumlng a rather gloomy countenance, "I am glad to see you and to know this, but you will have to excuse me; I am just going to the War Department to see Mr. Stanton " "Weil," said the editor, "I will walk over with you." The President, ed. with that apt good nature so characteristic of him, took up his hat, and, said, "Come along." When they reached the door of the Secretary's office Mr. Lincoln turned to his companion and said, "I shall have to ere Mr. Stanton alone, and you must excuse me," and, taking him by the hand, he con tinued, "Good hye. I hepe you will feel perfectly easy about having nominated me; don's be troubled about it, I forgive you.

Whitewash for Outside Work.

Ordinary lime wash will rub off and in time is washed off by rains. There are two methods of preventing this: One is to add something to the wash, like give, that will hold the perticles of lime in piace, and the other is to add something to the wash that will change the slightly soluble lime Into an insoluble compound. A quarter of a pound of glue, soaked in cold water and then dissolved by heat, may be added to each pailful of whitewash. If fat of any kind be added to the lime while slaking a lime coap is formed, which does not wash off. When slaking lime for a pailful of wash add a pound of tallow or clean fat to the hot and claking lime, and thin with hot water. The Treasury Department wach, used on light houses and other government buildings is made as follows: Place half a buchel of freshly-burned lime In a barre! and slake with boiling water; etrain and add a reck of sait dissolved in water; boil three pounds of rice flour in water to a paete, and add it to the lime; soak a pound of good glue in cold water, and when nott dissolve by the aid of hear, and add this, with a round of Spanish white to the wash. THOSE who argue that President Cleveland's inexperience in public affairs is compelled to make his administration a failure, forget that Mr. Arthur, who is conceded to have been the best President since Lincoln, never held an office higher than Quartermester-General on the Governor's staff, except that he was Collector of New York from which he was turned out by Hayes on charges preferred by Secretaty Sherman. The prediction of failure in regard to Cleveland is usually tather to the hope that he will eignally fail.

THE name of Daniel seems to have special prominence in connection with Cleveland. Daniel Manning deserves the distinction of doing more to cause his nomination and election than any other man. Daniel Lockwood delivered the nominating speeches which made him Mayor, and has been his trusted Private Secretary; sia. Daniel Manning is now his Secretary of the Tressury and Cleveland himself has proved to be a very Daniel in leading the conquering hosts.

Ir we are to judge by his address, President Cleveland is not an egotistical man by any means. The address contains 1,688 words and the personal pronoun "I" is used but five times. Washington's first address has 1,300 words and 20 "Is," his sec-588 and Arthur but once in his of 431

DEAD-LETTER SALES.

The Singular Articles Sent Through the Malis and Never Cailed for.

Washington Cor. Cincinnati Times-Star.] The packages which are examined at the dead-letter oilice are made un again, some simes the contents of two or three put in one, sometimes bundled together again as they were receive l, wrapped in brown paper, and sent to some auctioneer to be sold. is advertised, and usually draws a pretty large attendance. 'Noboly is permitted to examine the contents of the package being soid. The printed catalogue tells briefly the contents of each, but not with sufficient detail to give much liles of what they really contain. And the catalogue is not consulted by all the bld lers So the buying of these packages, unmbering thousands as they do. is much like a lottery venture. Indeed, it is largely because of this that the sale attracts so large a number of people. The auction-rooms where it is conducted are usually crowded, and the sale is very interesting and sometimes amusing.

The class of articles making up these mys torious packages le so varied and so julicrously combined as to cause shouts of laughter where they are opened. As a rnie, buyers do not open the packages at the auction roms, for they know that they run n risk of making them eives laughing stock. There are usually enough who run this risk, however, to keep the crowl in a good-natured roar, and show the funny uses that are made of the mails. One purchaser at the sale just closed got in one of the packages which he bought a black wool hat, an old fife, and a pair of old red drawers. His amusement and chagrin were no greater, however, than that of man who found the contents of his package to be a fot of daniaged and soile I underclathing for the gentler ex, four lady's linen collirs, and a small feather for n lady's hat. Still another lot turnel out on examination to be a chill's bib, a pair of cheap linger-rings, two spools of thread and a rubber diaper. Another got as his prize seventeen paper, of line-cut tobacco, a button-hook, and a pair of socks, One package which excited rours of laughter from everyboly but the pur haser contained some cheap jewelry, a butter-knife, a suzarspoon, eleven old toothbrushes, and a buttonhook. Still another had two pairs of chil dren's shors, two handkerchiefs, a worn apron, and lour old nightcaps.

One purchaser was made happy by finding in his very hoavy package Gaskell's Com-pendium and an old jelly glass. One ludividual, presumably a government clerk, got in his package a book entitled, "Why Wa Are Democrats," nnother bought a handsomely bound Bible, and another a copy of "Hoyle's Games." There were large number. of corsets, large numbers of "narmonicas, and hundred; of packages containing both men's and women's un lerwear and overwear in ali stages of cleanliness and otherwise, and all conditions as to wear nud wearing possibilities. Faise teeth, wern rubber shoes, a circular saw, a pound of tea, bottles of tooth wash, electric batteries, snits of clothing, several watches, and quantities of jowwere among the curlous articles Intrusted to the mails. The posterfire department accompanies the catalogue of articles with a brief suggestion to the public that if those smiding packages would see that they ars will wrapped, carefully addressed, and bearing on the corner the name and address of the senia, the losser would not be onetenth what they are now, for if they were nacalled for and undelivered they would be returned to the seaders.

An Accedote of Gen. Kilpatrick.

The late Gen. Judson Kilpatrick used to relate this story at his own expense: Soon after the announcement in the newspaper. thut he had been appointed minister to Chili, Gen. Kilpatrick was met by an old indy who had known bing from childhood, atal to whose bucolic mind the galiant gen erals large way of relating som things had semetimes seemed like exaggeration. A. Novel Railway. A Newark, N. J., man has conceived the startling idea of building an inverted railway. He proposes that the car wheels should be atationary and operated by stationary engines, while passengers and freight would be transported in long troughs, with a keel moving upon the wheals in a permanent shed extending the whole length of the line.

One of America's Immortais,

The distinctively American poet and moralist, John G. Whittier, Ilves a bachelor in a modest little frame house on the main street of Amesbury, the carriage making town of Massachusetts. He is now nearly 78, but bears lifs years well, though the generation among whom he has done the work that will immortalize him have gone before him. Of Quaker ancestry, his whole life has been one with a simple, straightforward purpose—that of the moral elevation of munkind. A native of Massachusetts, and with the usual district school education, Mr. Whittier, at the uge of 20, went to Boston, where he soon became editor of The American Manufacturer. Returning to his native place. Haverhili, he represented it in the state legislnture during 1835-b, when he became a prominent Abolitionist and was appointed secretary of the American Anti-Slavery society. In 1838-9 he edited The Pennsyivania Freeman, a paper devoted to the cause of abolition; but the office was burned by a toob, and Mr. Whittier returned to Massachusetts, where he fought with his pen, in both prose and poetry, for human freedom. As a poet his bound," published in 1865, was the first poem coataining that beautiful sentiment which is n churacteristic of his best work. Though he bas written much that is charming, his "Maud Mulier" and "School Days" will probably be best remembered.

WALT. WHITMAN. Walt. Whitman, who has become famous as a poet possessing an eccentricity in verbal expression, was born in 1819, on the western rige of Long Island, within sound of the sea. He was educated in the common schools and afterwards worked in printing offices, occasionally acting as a newspaper editor and contributing to the nangazines. In an old number of the Whig mentily, The Review, will be found a story signed "Walter Whitchild, don't fret about 1:. You may sit man." In 1847-8 he started on a loug jaunt over the middle and southern states, up the Mississippi to the great takes and Canada. that the novel-reader over reveled in, but it Iu 1855 he abandoned a successful business in New York to make "epics fit for the new that dear little auburn hen't gets high world." "Leaves of Grass," first printed enough from the groun! to go to school and wenty-seven years ago, was partly set up bu punched by its fellow-boy, that name with his own hands. His aim was to give expression to nature as we actually flad it in the American laborer, boatman, mechanic. he may be Sidney Fitzherbert Marmaduke, If the great painters, he rensoued, were as right up to the handle, but he will go withing to paint a blacksmith as a lord, why through his boyhood as "Carrots," or "Reithough his boyhood hi field and spent four years as a hard-worked, unpaid army nurse, unselfishly and uncaringly tending the seeds of the disease which crippled him and made blm oid before his time. had under his care 100,000 soldiers, and is prouder of this of his works than of any of his volumes. His home in recent years has been a modest one in Camden, N. J., where be lives almost a recluse.

Anthor of Sanday School Poetry.

Very few readers of newspaper poetry wili recognize this name, and yet for twenty years past Mrs. Smith has been an almost continuous contributor of poetry to the press. Her enamelod relic box, with a rock crystal upon poems are almost always of a devotional character, and many will be found in the hyma burg placed a thumb when required to take books of the Union schools throughout the country. Her later poems are published in The Congregationalist. Mrs. Smith is a sunny-faced little lady who would perhaps acknowledge forty years. Of late years she has lived in New York city, though a part of her life was passed in the west, her husband having formerly been engaged in business in Wyoming Territory. Sho has traveled ex-tensively, and is as likely to be heard from in San Francisco or Paris, or St. Petersburg, as the home of her adoption. She is invariably accompanied in her journeys by her only child, now a lad some ten years old. She was born in Brighton, wenr Rochester, N.Y. How Governors of Territories Are Appointed.

[Riff Nya.] Washington has this prculinrily, that the man who has once listened to her siren song and warmed his frozen heart la her smiles is nine cases out of ten becomes her siave. He Is from that moment a victim to the office habit, und as the might who has once bucked the tiger and wou, seeks the menagerie again and again, even though he return torn, Incerated and busted, so does the threadbare and shabby gentrel p ditician who has once lived easily in Washington for a time linger about the beautiful flame that he may scored his wings once again. There are a good many of these specimens. Some of them have shirts, others have nothing but a fading hope. Many of them inve waited for years, sking a big foreign mission at Ilrst, but at last howering their estimate till they are willing to do almost anything so that they may draw a sun, no matter how smail, from the mighty treasury which you and I, gentle reader, labor to sustain. Year after year the mighty army increases. The president and heads of departments become at last desperate. A wild-eyed craak haunts them with his hungry appeals, till the suspicion arises that in a few more days he will biossom forth as an assassin if he doesn't get an appointment, and so the young territory has to suffer. The president looks on the map to see which territory is the farthest away, and from which point the ap-pointee would have the most difficulty to return, and thea he makes the appointment!
